Furthermore, we have a pumpkin-carving contest that could score you a $100 Amazon gift card. See inside for details, or visit Metro.us to learn more.

POT FARMER'S DREAMS GO UP IN SMOKE

1 California's newly legalized marijuana industry was hit hard by the deadliest blaze in state history. Fires consuming communities north of San Francisco have destroyed almost 30 pot farms in Sonoma, Mendocino and Napa counties and significantly damaged a similar number, according to the California Growers Association. Those are a fraction of the estimated 15,000 pot farms in the region. California is the source of most of the nation's illegal marijuana farming. Humboldt and Mendocino counties, in the cannabis-growing region known as the "Emerald Triangle," have led the state's production. California voters approved medical marijuana in 1996, despite a federal ban and last year approved recreational use of the drug by adults. Since then, the state has been developing rules to allow recreational sales.

DIPLOMACY TO CONTINUE UNTIL 'FIRST BOMB DROPS'

2 Secretary of State Rex Tillerson said that President Trump had instructed him to continue diplomatic efforts to calm rising tensions with North Korea, saying "those diplomatic efforts will continue until the first bomb drops." Speaking on CNN's "State of the Union," Tillerson downplayed messages that President Trump had previously posted on Twitter suggesting Tillerson was wasting his time trying to negotiate with "Little Rocket Man," a derogatory nickname Trump has coined for North Korea's leader Kim Jong Un. Trump "has made it clear to me to continue my diplomatic efforts," Tillerson said. Tillerson's comments Sunday come amid soaring tensions between the United States and North Korea following a series of weapons tests by Pyongyang and a war of words between the two countries' leaders.

DEATH TOLL FROM BLASTS IN MOGADISHU TOPS 200

4 More than 200 people were killed by twin bomb blasts that struck busy junctions in the heart of Somalia's capital Mogadishu, officials said on Sunday, marking the deadliest attacks since an Islamist insurgency began in 2007. President Mohamed Abdullahi Farmaajo declared three days of national mourning and called for donations of blood and funds to victims of Saturday's attack. At least 100 others were wounded. "Today's horrific attack proves our enemy would stop nothing to cause our people pain and suffering. Let's unite against terror," he tweeted. Police said a truck bomb exploded outside a hotel in the K5 intersection that is lined with government offices, restaurants and kiosks, flattening several buildings and setting dozens of vehicles on fire.

DRONE HITS COMMERCIAL AIRLINER IN CANADA

5 A drone hit an airplane landing at a Quebec City airport this week, the first time an unmanned flying object has collided with commercial aircraft in Canada, Transport Minister Marc Garneau said on Sunday. No injuries were reported in the incident, which happened on Thursday at Jean Lesage International Airport and involved a plane belonging to Quebec-based Skyjet Aviation. "I am extremely relieved that the aircraft only sustained minor damage and was able to land safely," Garneau said in a statement. There were six passengers and two crew members on board the airplane at the time of the collision, according to local news media reports. Drones are not allowed within 3.4 miles of Canadian airports, helipads and seaplane bases. Operators who put aircraft at risk face steep fines and jail time under Canadian law.

The Embr Wave is like a personal thermostat for your body, the MIT-trained creators say. PROVIDED BY EMBR WAVE

MIT grads create wearable 'thermostat' to warm you up or cool you down anytime

The Embr Wave is worn on your wrist and promises to deliver "thermal relief on demand."

KRISTIN TOUSSAINT
@kristindakota
kristin.toussaint@metro.us

From freezing offices to sweltering subway cars, sometimes the temperature of your surroundings isn't ideal. But when you can't control the thermostat, what can you do?

Three MIT grads created a solution: a wearable "thermostat" to warm you up or cool you down as needed.

Called the Embr Wave, the invention has received more than $500,000 in funding since its Kickstarter launched at the end of September, blowing way past the initial $100,000 goal. The Kickstarter ends Oct. 27.

The Embr Wave wraps around your wrist and promises to deliver "thermal relief on demand."

"The kind of key insight we had is that warming and cooling one spot on your body can improve your overall comfort, without changing your core temperature," said co-founder Sam Shames. "We all know this intuitively; on a hot summer day at the beach, you dip your toes in the water and feel better."

The device changes temperature at your control, delivering that sensation to your wrist and thus affecting how your whole body feels.

"Being comfortable means no one specific area of your body is hotter or colder than you like," Shames said. "In the winter, no matter how many jackets you have on, if your ears are cold, you're uncomfortable. But if you wrap your hands around a warm mug, that counteracts your ears feeling cold. It cancels it out."

The Embr Wave lets you personalize those "canceling-out sensations," he added.

Shames and his co-founders Matthew Smith and David Cohen-Tanugi met at MIT when Shames was an undergrad and the others were earning their PhDs. They created the first prototype of the Embr Wave for a competition in 2013.

The three would work in a campus lab that had the air conditioner blasting in the summer. Their idea started out as an solution to help save building energy costs by letting people customize their temperature.

"The much more immediate value proposition [is that] temperature just feels good. It provides you with relief and makes you feel better in a powerful way," Shames said. "This feels good in the same way splashing water after a workout does, or cupping your hands around a hot drink."

The three are still passionate about pursuing the environmental aspect. They received a grant from the National Science Foundation to researcher if the Embr Wave can increase the "float zone," which Shames described as the range of temperatures you can set a building's thermostat to and still maintain comfort.

If it affects that zone even slightly, say allowing buildings to be set at 73 degrees instead of 72, it still has a big impact.

"For every one degree difference in the change of a thermostat, you save 10 percent of heating and cooling costs in a building," Shames said.

This is just the beginning for the founders. They're hoping to explore how the Embr Wave can be involved in entertainment, virtual reality and even nonverbal communication.

"We see temperature as a really untapped way of interacting with other people and with the world," Shames said. "We're excited to help people think about temperature in a different way."

"...temperature just feels good. It provides you with relief and makes you feel better in a powerful way."

New Pill Targets Weak Bladder Muscles, Preventing Accidents and Leaks

Developed for 24-hour bladder control; participants in clinical trial experience dramatic reduction in trips to the bathroom, embarrassing leaking, and nighttime urgency without the usual negative side effects of drugs.

Urivarx: This new patented clinically proven pill solution is now available nationwide

Robert Ward,
Associated Health Press

AHP – Adult diaper sales are expected to plummet as results from a clinical trial on a new, patented bladder control pill have finally been released.

Sold under the brand name UriVarx™, the new pill contains key ingredients that keeps the bladder from releasing voluntarily, which reduces accidents and frequent bathroom trips.

Perhaps more impressive, it also targets the tiny muscles around the bladder, which helps the bladder to create a tighter seal.

This would explain why the average UriVarx™ user in clinical trials experiences a 66% reduction in urinary incontinence symptoms, such as day and night leaking and sudden urges to urinate.

NEW DISCOVERY IN BLADDER CONTROL

Until now, doctors believed it was impossible to strengthen the muscles that control the bladder. They are amazed to see that it can now be done with the non-prescription UriVarx™ pill.

"As you get older, and the involuntary muscles around your bladder weaken, you lose urinary control. With your bladder wall unable to properly seal, you constantly leak and feel pressure to urinate" explains Dr. Bassam Damaj of Innovus Pharmaceuticals.

"UriVarx™ targets the bladder muscles and help restores vital kidney health, reducing urgency and frequency. It also helps you "hold it" for hours so you never have to worry about embarrassing accidents ever again!"

FREEDOM FROM SUDDEN URGES AND LEAKS

Since hitting the market, sales for the patented UriVarx™ pill have soared and there are some very good reasons why.

To begin with, the double blind large clinical studies published in the clinicaltrials.gov have been impressive. Participants taking UriVarx™ saw a stunning reduction in urinary frequency, which resulted in fewer bathroom trips both day and night.

They also experienced a dramatic decrease in incontinence episodes, such as leaking and bed wetting.

The active ingredients in UriVarx™ comes from a patented formula. It is both safe and healthy. There are also no known serious side effects in its history of use.

Scientists believe that the ingredients target the muscles of the bladder to grow stronger. These muscles are responsible for keeping the bladder tightly sealed. They also help the bladder to completely empty, allowing bacteria to be flushed from the urinary tract.

Research has shown that as you get older, certain hormonal changes in the body cause these muscles to shrink and become lose. This is what causes the bladder to be over active and the resulting urine accidents and why UriVarx™ seems to be so effective in the published clinical trials.

EXCITING RESULTS FROM URIVARX USERS

Many UriVarx™ users say their bladders have never been stronger. For the first time in years, they are confident and in complete control. Adult pads and diapers are no longer a big worry.

"After my third child, I couldn't control my bladder. I was running to the bathroom all the time! And once I hit my 60s it became so unpredictable I needed to wear adult pads every day" explained Marie L. of Danbury, CT.

"I was embarrassed so before going to my doctor I decided to try UriVarx and I'm so glad I did! The urgency is gone and I no longer feel like my bladder is about to explode. I can also "hold it" when I need to so I'm no longer living in constant fear of finding a bathroom."

IMPRESSIVE CLINICAL RESULTS

The exciting clinical results published on the government clinical website clinicaltrials.gov show that UriVarx™ can strengthen your bladder fast, significantly reducing the urine urgency and leaks.

In a new double-blind, placebo-controlled clinical study, 142 men and women with bladder control issues were separated into two groups. The first group was given a placebo while the other received UriVarx™.

The results were incredible. The participants who received UriVarx™ saw major improvements in leaking, pressure, and the urgency to go – all without the usual side effects seen in prescription drugs! They also reported fewer trips to the bathroom both day and night.

Overall, the UriVarx™ group experienced:

- 56% Reduction in Urge Incontinence
- 66% Reduction in Stress Incontinence
- 61% Reduction in Urgency
- 33% Reduction in Frequency
- 46% Reduction in Nighttime Bathroom Trips

Additionally, at the end of clinical trial and after seeing the results, 84% of the participants taking UriVarx™ said it significantly improved their quality of life.

"The clinical findings are incredible, but people still wonder if it will really work" explains Dr. Bassam Damaj. "It's normal to be skeptical, but we've seen thousands of UriVarx™ users get results exactly like the participants in the study. It's an amazing product."

HOW IT WORKS

UriVarx™ is a pill that's taken just once daily. It does not require a prescription.

The active ingredients are patented natural extracts.

Research shows that as we get older, the muscles which surround the bladder weaken. This is caused by hormonal changes in the body that causes the muscles to atrophy and weaken.

When they become too small and weak, they cannot seal your bladder shut, which causes leaking, accidents, among other incontinence symptoms.

It also prevents your bladder from fully emptying, which can result in persistent bacterial infections and UTIs.

UriVarx™'s active ingredient targets the muscles around the bladder, making them stronger. Supporting ingredients in UriVarx™ support kidney function and overall urinary health.

BLADDER PROBLEMS GONE

With daily use, UriVarx™ can restore strong bladder control and help users overcome leakage without the negative side effects or interactions associated with drugs.

Leakage sufferers can now put an end to the uncontrollable urges, the embarrassing accidents, and enjoy an entirely new level of comfort and confidence.

BPD officer charged with stealing money from evidence room

Authorities say the officer stole money from a file of a closed bank robbery case.

Joseph Nee was indicted by a Suffolk County Grand Jury on Thursday. GETTY IMAGES

A Boston police officer has been indicted after officials say that he stole money from a file of a closed bank robbery case within the police department's evidence room.

Authorities say Joseph Nee, 44, stole approximately $2,000 and was attempting to launder the money at Plainridge Park Casino.

Nee was indicted by a Suffolk County Grand Jury on Thursday, according to Attorney General Maura Healey's office. He will be arraigned Oct. 30 on charges of larceny over $350 and money laundering.

Nee has been with the Boston Police Department since 1998 and was assigned to the Evidence Management Unit in Hyde Park. Following his indictment, he has been suspended without pay pending the outcome of the case, BPD said in a statement.

Nee allegedly stole the money in January 2017, according to authorities, from a file of a closed bank robbery case. The money was identified because of an anti-theft dye pack that discharged during the robbery that left traces of red dye on the bills.

Authorities were able to identify Nee's theft after he used some of the stolen money on slot machines at Plainridge Park Casino and then allegedly redeemed the stolen money at a casino kiosk for bills that were not stained with the dye.

Nee's charges came after an investigation by the Massachusetts State Police Gaming Enforcement Unit, the Boston Police Anti-Corruption Unit and the Attorney General's Gaming Enforcement Division.

The BPD said that they received information by their Anti-Corruption Unit about the alleged misconduct and that at the request of BPD, Healey opened a criminal investigation.

"The behavior alleged in today's indictment is inexcusable. I hold my officers to the highest standards and expect them to obey the law that they have taken an oath to uphold," BPD Commissioner William Evans said in a statement. "Allegations like this can damage the trust my officers have worked so hard to build with the community. The Anti-Corruption Unit will continue to investigate all allegations of wrongdoing by my officers."

TRUMPKIN CONTEST

Win a $100 Amazon gift card with Metro's Trumpkin contest

Metro is launching its first-ever pumpkin-carving contest and our theme is Trumpkins.

In case you're unfamiliar, a Trumpkin (also known as a Trump-o'-lantern) is simply a Halloween jack-o'-lantern carved in the likeness of President Donald Trump. All in good fun, really. So much of the news cycle dominates politics, it's only natural that this year's Halloween pumpkins be presidential. They can be silly, they can be serious, they can have blonde wigs and ties. Get creative.

If you have aversion to knives, don't worry, we'll consider painted pumpkins too.

Submit photos of your carved pumpkins on Twitter, Facebook and Instagramusing the hashtag #MetroWeen, or email photos to Morgan@metro.us. Check out our MetroWeen edition on Thursday, Oct. 26 to see the winning Trumpkin and to check out the rest of our special Halloween coverage.

Pumpkin carving tips

For the novice pumpkin-carver, here are some helpful tips, via Good Housekeeping.

1. Choose a round, fresh pumpkin with a flat bottom.
2. Use a boning knife to cut out the lid on an angle.
3. Scoop out the seeds and pulp using a claw, and thin down the inner wall to 1 ¼ inches thick.
4. Hold the pumpkin in your lap as you carve.
5. Use a small saw to make intricate designs.
6. Amazon sells pumpkin carving kits for as low as $8.

Metro's winning Trumpkin will be announced on Oct. 26. GETTY IMAGES

7 Celebs banned or suspended by Twitter

Last week, Twitter suspended actress Rose McGowan's account for allegedly violating the site's policies, prohibiting her from tweeting, retweeting or liking posts for 12 hours, and the internet was not having it.

The timing was curious: McGowan had been vocal online all week about Harvey Weinstein's sexual-assault allegations — tweeting about his misconduct toward her and other women in Hollywood and accusing Ben Affleck of feigning ignorance about Weinstein's history of violating women. Celebs, including Jessica Chastain and Jamie Lee Curtis, were outraged that the platform would silence McGowan, a victim speaking out about sexual abuse, yet stand by as our commander-in-chief threatens nuclear war and constantly denounces the media.

On Thursday, Twitter issued a statement revealing that it had blocked McGowan because she had tweeted a private phone number, which is, in fact, against Twitter policy. Still, many users elected to stay off the site on Friday in honor of McGowan's campaign, #WomenBoycottTwitter.

Which other celebs have been suspended or banned by Twitter, and why? Here are six more famous folks who've been flagged by the little blue bird. METRO

Rose McGowan
GETTY IMAGES

Courtney Love

In 2009, the "Doll Parts" singer went on a Twitter rant against designer Dawn Simorangkir, calling her "a drug-pushing, thieving prostitute with a history of assault and battery." Simorangkir responded by suing her in 2011. In the midst of the anti-defamation suit, Twitter suspended Love's account, which was under @CourtneyLoveUK. It's still suspended, but now she tweets @Courtney.

Christopher Walken

The "True Romance" actor certainly gives off an eccentric vibe, but in 2009, Twitter discovered he wasn't responsible for posting bizarro, beloved tweets to the account @Walken20. To the dismay of the account's tens of thousands of followers, Twitter temporarily suspended it, because impersonation is against Twitter policy. Walken is still not online.

Adele

Even Adele?!? OK, the "Rumor Has It" crooner wasn't actually banned by the platform itself, but rather, her managers. She apparently had a bad habit of tweetin' while boozin' (don't we all?). Now, while she still writes her own tweets @Adele, they are approved and posted by her management.

Azealia Banks

The ever-trolling singer had her account suspended after she tweeted racist and homophobic comments at "One Direction" heartthrob Zayn Malik (for shame!). Slay-Z is a notorious provocateur online and has also feuded with Rihanna, Iggy Azalea, Lady Gaga, Pharrell ... and the list goes on. Her account is still suspended, which is probably for the best.

50 Cent

The "Candy Shop" rapper (real name Curtis Jackson) had his TwitPic (an app that lets you post photos and video to Twitter) account suspended when he tweeted "Y'all like my Kim K burger?" alongside a crass Photoshop with a hamburger in place of her behind. Real classy. In time, Jackson's account was reactivated and he apologized and warned that his content was strictly for "motherf-ckers ages 18 and older."

Clint Eastwood

Shortly after the 2016 election, the account @EastwoodUSA was suspended following a few pro-Trump tweets, namely, "Thank you America, I don't have long left to live but now I know the last few years will be great, I can't thank you enough #PresidentTrump." Conservatives online were up in arms, alleging liberal bias, but it turns out Twitter flagged the account because it was fake. The "Gran Torino" director is 84 years old and, according to his daughter Morgan, has no idea how to use the platform.

Giant pumpkins will take over the Boston Public Market

Just in time for Halloween.

MATT JUUL
@MetroBOS
letters@metro.us

You don't have to be Charlie Brown to experience great pumpkins this fall.

The Boston Public Market will have a pair of massive gourds forklifted over on Oct. 16, including a 950-pound "PumpKing" that will be crowned the third annual "Official Pumpkin of Boston." The big donation was made by the folks at Red Apple Farm in Phillipston, as well as Greenfield farmers Lou and Sue Chadwich.

A 575-pound pumpkin will join the PumpKing at Boston Public Market thanks to fellow Phillipston farmer Tom Brouillet. The pair of giant gourds will be on display starting at noon Monday and will remain at the Market's southeast corner throughout the fall.

GETTY IMAGES

Guests who stop by the market for the unveiling will also get the chance to snap photos with the Hub's official pumpkin, as well as participate in a naming contest. Past PumpKings have received some pretty awesome names over the years, including "Gourdo" and "Big Papi."

The half-ton pumpkins will take over the space ahead of the market's second annual Harvest Party, which kicks off Thursday, Oct. 19. The massive display will serve as the backdrop for fundraising event's photo booth.

In addition to the giant pumpkins, the party will feature more than 35 local vendors, live music by bands from Berklee College of Music as well as a special shopping spree. Two attendees at the event will be selected to take part in a 30-minute splurge, where they can grab up to $500 worth of lobster, wine, doughnuts, produce and more. And if you're afraid of lugging all that stuff back home, don't worry, because the market will cover the winners' rides home.

Proceeds from the party will go to benefit the Market's Community Engagement Fund, which offers free and public educational experiences around the Boston area.

Can Exercise Help Reduce Chronic Pain and PTSD?

BOSTON — Having healthy alternatives for dealing with physical and mental pain is important to everyone. There is a new study at the VA Boston Healthcare Jamaica Plain Campus that is looking at how people who suffer from chronic pain and PTSD can get relief benefits from exercise.

The VA Boston Healthcare System Women's Health Sciences Division, National Center for Posttraumatic Stress Disorder (PTSD), is looking for male and female Veterans who want to participate in a study to determine if exercise helps reduce chronic pain and PTSD symptoms.

Studies show that people with chronic pain and/or PTSD may benefit from exercise said Erica R. Scioli, Ph.D., Clinical Research Psychologist at the VA and Assistant Professor of Psychiatry, Boston University School of Medicine. "We are recruiting individuals who suffer from chronic pain and PTSD. They do not require diagnoses to be in the study. In addition to this group, we are looking to recruit a small group of individuals who also suffer from mTBI," said Scioli.

New research suggests that individuals with both chronic pain and PTSD may suffer from greater pain, distress and disability than if they have either condition alone. And, there is evidence that mild traumatic brain injury (mTBI) can commonly co-occur among individuals with chronic pain and PTSD.

We want to learn how "feel good" hormones affect chronic pain in response to exercise, Scioli said. The study will investigate how the stress hormone system responds to exercise and measure neurohormones such as Neuropeptide Y (NPY) and Allopregnanolone (ALLO), both of which have anti-pain, anti-stress and neuroprotective properties. In addition, the role of brain derived neurotrophic factor (BDNF), another protein that is enhanced in response to exercise and has anti-pain benefits will be explored. Those wanting to be in the study should contact Joyce Ambrosino at (857) 364-5568 for screening. Participants should be able to engage in a 12-week exercise-training program.

VA New England Healthcare System includes eight medical centers located in Vermont, New Hampshire, Maine, Connecticut, Rhode Island, and Massachusetts. It is an integral part of the Veterans Integrated Systems Network (VISN) 1.

Thurgood Marshall's superhero roots

Josh Gad and Chadwick Boseman talk to Metro about a movie for everyone.

GREGORY WAKEMAN
@MetroBOS
gregory.wakeman@metro.us

Boseman as Marshall and Gad as Sam Friedman OPEN ROAD FILMS

"Marshall" actors Chadwick Boseman and Josh Gad are reticent to talk up the film's importance, despite the timeliness of the film. Instead, the pair were quick to insist the number of other reasons why they were initially attracted to it.

"I did it because I enjoyed the script and enjoyed who I got to work with," Boseman says. "I wanted to work with Reggie [Hudlin, director] and I wanted to tell the story of Thurgood Marshall. Yes, he's important. But I also think he's a cool dude. He was cool for what he did. He was cool because he fought for justice. He was cool because he was courageous, arrogant and selfless. When you start talking about how important movies are, it's like, 'You have to see the movie!' But you don't want to see it. And I knew this was a movie people would want to see."

Josh Gad, who plays lawyer Sam Friedman, adds, "It's important without being self-righteous. And that's what I really respect about it. This really is a movie for everybody. At the same time, it is covering this incredible period of history and this incredible journey before he is the man in the robes. It's the origin movie of a superhero. It takes place in 1941, but it could just as easily take place in 2017. There's something eerily familiar about it."

What stood out for you about the script?

"Biopics is what people pitch to me," Boseman says. "And when I was told to read the script I was like, 'This is my third. I don't know.' But when I eventually read it, I just saw a Western. This is Marshall coming into town to implement justice. I saw a buddy, not a cop movie — a buddy-attorney movie. I saw a whodunit. I could forget that it was about Thurgood Marshall."

What's unique about making a biopic?

"I feel the pressure initially," said Boseman. "Once I've taken it on, I'm somehow able to push that pressure off and then dive into the process and do the part. I always try to find the things that are human and that I can identify with. Then I look for things that aren't like me and that I need to really hone in on. It's making sure that I have a plethora of information that's available to me."

GETTY IMAGES

Does Hollywood have a responsibility to tell stories like these?

"To a certain extent," says Gad. "One of the things that makes art so powerful is that it can be a reflection of the times and humanity and of who we are at any given time. Now there are definitely issues to be reflected back at us so we can have the difficult discussions. It's tricky, though, because you never want to be preachy about it. You always want to be respectful and do your job, which is to simultaneously entertain while giving the audience something to chew on. So I think that if you achieve that you are ahead of the game."

Erasing inequality from our public schools

"We don't think enough about structural inequality, racism, poverty and all of the reasons why your children may not be schooled." ISTOCK

How an ex-principal is challenging the myths around the concept of "college for all."

PAT KING
@MetroBOS
patrick.king@metro.us

Children have always been fed that age-old line that if they work hard enough in school, they can do anything they want in life. But even kids know this isn't always the case. There are obstacles that are just unavoidable for those who are not born into privilege.

The truth is: the cards are stacked against children born into racial inequality and low-income households when it comes to getting into and receiving assistance from some of the country's best schools.

Educator and author Linda F. Nathan witnessed this first-hand during her time as co-headmaster of the Boston Arts Academy. In her book "When Grit Isn't Enough: A High School Principal Examines How Poverty and Inequality Thwart the College-for-All Promise," Nathan is out to disprove many of the myths that are told to children and to speak bluntly about some of the harsh realities of the disparity of race and class in our society.

"I was really trying to take on this idea that we think that success is individually determined," says Nathan. "But we don't think enough about structural inequality, racism, poverty and all of the reasons why your children may not be schooled."

Nathan interviewed over 90 BAA alumni to learn which roadblocks they encountered after graduating and was equally blown away and heartbroken by the data she received. She split the book into five chapters devoted to the most popular myths she encountered in her conversations: "Money doesn't have to be an obstacle"; "race doesn't matter"; "just work harder"; "everyone can go to college"; and "if you believe, your dreams will come true."

She found the majority of her students who were not given as many advantages as the top percent were either not accepted or given the necessary financial assistance from colleges and universities despite their capabilities. "Colleges for the most part, while many of them say, 'We want you, we want you' — many of those colleges really don't," she says. "They don't give them enough money to attend, and when they get there, there is very little support for a lot of kids."

She says that because colleges keep such a stringent acceptance they do not have the same standard for producing capable members of society.

"We hold public-school educators accountable for their outcome, I think colleges should be held accountable too. Not that they're not, but I've heard too many stories that have left me cold."

Nathan believes high schools should offer meaningful and realistic ways to enter the middle class, such as apprenticeship programs or hands-on technical training. "In this country, the way that it is rigged," she explains, "is everyone needs something after high school. A high school degree doesn't cut it anymore."

For the book's release, Nathan will be bringing this message to the people on a speaking tour kicking off at Emerson College on Oct. 17.

"Our whole democracy is at stake here," she says. "I don't want to part of a world where the only way you can get ahead is because of your skin color or the social class you were born into."

Tom Brady earned his 187th regular season victory on Sunday and now has more wins than any QB in NFL history.
GETTY IMAGES

Patriots hold on, take back first place in AFC East

The Pats struggled, but came away with a key road win Sunday.

ERIC WILBUR
@MetroBOS
sports@metro.us

Three things we learned in the Patriots' 24-17 victory over the Jets Sunday at MetLife Stadium.

1 Replay ridicule

In one of the more bizarre overturned calls in NFL history, the referees not only took away a Jets touchdown that would have cut the Patriots' lead to three with just over eight minutes remaining in the game, they also transferred possession of the ball after ruling Austin Seferian-Jenkins fumbled out of bounds in the end zone. By official rule, that is a touchback and Patriots ball. But replays never showed conclusive proof that Seferian-Jenkins failed to re-gain possession of the football, never mind less than definitive proof that he actually lost possession of it in any grand fashion. It turned out to be the difference in the game, as the Jets would tack on a field goal with less than four minutes remaining, meaning the Patriots were playing with a seven-point lead on their final drive of the game, not tied with the chance of overtime looming. The Jets got jobbed. CBS commentator Dan Fouts even called it, "One of the worst calls I've ever seen." Yup.

2 Whew

Not that Patriot fans should have expected total domination of the New York Jets, who entered Sunday tied with New England for first place in the AFC East. But what transpired in the first half at the Meadowlands was prime for sounding the panic alarm. In taking a 14-0 lead over the Patriots, Jets quarterback Josh McCown punished an already-beleaguered Patriots defense that seemed to almost be turning in the last straw in its first divisional contest of the season. But unlike the faint praise defensive coordinator Matt Patricia and company received following an uneven performance in Tampa Bay a week ago, maybe it's safe to — finally — suggest that the Pats' defense showed some semblance of life? Despite the auspicious beginning, the Patriots did manage slowed down the bleeding after New York built a two-touchdown lead. Cornerback Malcolm Butler, burned early in the game when McCown found receiver Jeremy Kerley for the Jets' first touchdown, came up with a huge interception with 40 seconds remaining in the first half. That allowed just enough time for Tom Brady to find Brandin Cooks with a deep, 42-yard pass into the red zone, followed by the first of two touchdowns caught by tight end Rob Gronkowski to go into halftime all tied up. You might even say that the D ate the Jets alive in the final minute of the game, with New York fighting in desperation. The bad news: Josh McCown joins the club of 300-yard passing quarterbacks (354 yards) against the New England defense this season. Josh McCown. Oh, and the high-powered Atlanta Falcons are on tap for next Sunday. Yikes.

3 Got your back

Mike Gillislee didn't help his own cause with a fumble lost in the first half, a matter that helped Bill Belichick keep him off the field for the next six series, but this was Dion Lewis' game from the start anyway, the kind of performance that makes one think that he has taken the torch to be considered New England's No. 1 running back. Lewis dashed for 52 yards on 11 carries, including a goal-line touchdown that would have figured to go to Gillislee if not for his butter fingers earlier in the game. Despite all the new blood, the Patriots have had a difficult time finding consistency in their running game. Turns out, it may have come from the running back who has been in Foxboro the longest anyway.

G.O.A.T. Stuff

Tom Brady became the winningest quarterback in NFL history with his 187th career regular season victory on Sunday in New Jersey. It broke a tie at 186 with Brett Favre and Peyton Manning. If you add on the whopping 25 career playoff victories Brady has (also a record) he now has 212 wins in the NFL. Matt Burke

Aries Talks will bring about a change that will help you make decisions regarding work, co-workers, and your health and relationships.

Taurus Add to your qualifications. Bone up on the latest technology. Be prepared to push your way into a better position or to take on more responsibilities.

Gemini Patience will be needed when dealing with children, a loved one or a friend. Keep in mind that everyone has bad days and that comfort will help.

Cancer Avoid temptation. Stick close to home and the people you know and trust. If you seek change, move things around at home or clear a space and pursue a hobby.

Leo Keep your life simple and organized. Look at change as a positive, not something to make a fuss over. Making personal improvements should be your goal.

Virgo Use your imagination to come up with ways to pass the time. Enjoying the company of someone who shares your concerns will lead to a great friendship.

Libra Practical choices will spare you from uncertainty and unexpected changes in relationships with friends, relatives and partners.

Scorpio How you handle or work with others will determine how much you get out of your day. You can stand out if you present your plans in a relatable way.

Sagittarius Information will be foggy at best and not likely to give you what you need. Deception will prevail if you don't ask direct questions.

Capricorn Work hard to finish some lingering projects. Taking care of business and negotiating personal or professional contracts will help put your mind at ease.

Aquarius Accepting what comes your way and dealing with it one step at a time will help you maintain control and make progress. Choose peace and love over chaos.

Pisces Business and personal relationships will be in the spotlight. Decisions regarding a tricky situation will help ease personal stress. EUGENIA LAST
